COMMENCEMENT

How Young People Close Their Connection With the High School With Excellent Papers and Receive Diplomas.

At the hour of eight o'clock last night the Opera House was full of the best people of Cedarville and vicinity, all having come to witness the graduating exercises of the class of 1900. The stage was beautifully decorated with flowers, and purple and orange hunting, the class colors.

The music for the evening was furnished by the Euterpean orchestra of Bloomington, Ohio, which played a piece between every two orations. The invocation was offered by Supt. R. A. Brown, Prof. Sayre's successor. The orations were all excellent, and as they were all delivered well, it would be impossible to say which did the best. We have tried to give a synopsis of each production, but to be appreciated, it is necessary to hear the whole oration.

RALPH BULL.

Ralph Bull was the first of the graduates to deliver his oration. "Honor" was the subject chosen by him, and he handled it in a very neat manner. Commencing with the story of the death of Leonidas and his three hundred brave soldiers at the pass of Thermopylae, he showed what men had considered honorable deeds, down to the present day. In the olden days honor was only bestowed on those who were skillful with their arms and brave in war. At the beginning of this century it was considerable dishonorable to refuse to fight a duel when challenged. Now all that is changed and men of science and our great writers and inventors are honored quite as much as the heroes in war.

EVA CRESWELL.

Miss Eva Creswell stated that the world is divided into classes, those who lift and those who lean, making her subject personal and in the form of a question, "Will you Lift or Lean?" "Wherever we may go in our homes, in school, in places of business or with whomsoever we may be associated, we meet with those who are always ready to help others to attain a higher standard in life, and lend a helping hand to those who seem to be overburdened. While there are those who are always shirking and depending on others for what they should do themselves."

These two classes of people were well depicted by the speaker, and the effect of their lives upon their fellow men. The oration was good in thought and well rendered.

ROBERT HARRISON.

"Our Nation's Progress" was discussed by Robert Harrison. He began with a vivid description of the condition of this country one hundred years ago, and what our forefathers had to overcome in order to get this nation on a firm foundation. He then compared the condition of things now with our civilization of today.

"Then the United States was looked upon with contempt by nearly all the nations of the old world, very few of them recognizing her as an independent country. But today she stands equal and in many respects superior to the best nations of the world."

The oration closed with a warning to regard to the many dangers which threaten this country. Mr. Harrison is a pleasing speaker, and the oration was well delivered.

KATIE NISBET.

"I am Done—Take the Witness," was the original subject selected by Miss Katie Nisbet. The following are some of her sentences which show the drift of her thought: "Life is a trial for all of us. Not in the sense that we are culpable—but that we are witnesses in our own behalf, and that by our answers to the interrogations of the world, by our responses to the demands of occasions and to the necessities of our occupations, which will affect the verdict in our own particular case."

"The jury that tries us is not limited to twelve men, but is composed of those of the world with whom we shall come in contact."

The speaker enumerated the many advantages which the class had enjoyed which would fit them for the trial of life. The oration was original and well spoken.

MERLE McFARLAND.

Miss Merle McFarland came next on the program with an oration entitled, "Man's Existence, A Beautiful Possibility." Under this head the speaker spoke of the mind of man, what it has accomplished, and what can be done with a well trained mind. "The mind must be such as to enable him who possesses it to adapt himself to all the vicissitudes of life. He must be able to discover and to invent if he would prove beneficial to the world and to those around him." It was because of Columbus's strong mind that America was discovered, and by the same power that Edison produced his wonderful inventions. By a skillful argument and apt illustration, the speaker proved that it was through the mind that "Man's Existence will become a Beautiful Reality."

FRANK ORR.

Mr. Frank Orr appeared as the champion of the Boers in their struggle with Great Britain, under the subject, "Another Nation's Struggle for Liberty." He first compared the strength of the two countries and their military training. He then spoke of the causes of grievance between the two countries, showing that the Boers are in the right and England wrong. "The Boers in this war have the same spirit that prompted the farmers at Lexington; that nerved the American arms at Bunker Hill, that warmed the hearts of Washington and his freezing soldiers at Valley Forge."

"Brave was the wonderful charge of Pickett's men and the equally brave defense of the Union troops on the blood stained heights of Gettysburg. Brave were the 300 at Thermopylae; but equally brave are the humble peasants, seeking death, climbing the rugged heights of Spion Kop, willing to die if need be to save their country from the British. The Boers will never submit. It is liberty or death."

MARY STERRETT.

The audience all wondered what Miss Mary Sterrett would make out of her subject "A, B, C," but from her first sentence it was clear that these letters stood for Aims, Battle, Conquest. She began with these striking sentences, "Life is made up of a series of aims and desires. Prosperity or success is a continual battle with discouragement and disappointments. But to him who has set his aim high and fought a courageous battle, the conquest is sure and his labor has not been in vain. Among the things which the speaker emphasized, were a high aim, zealous labor, and taking advantage of the little things. The oration was well written and well delivered.

ELLA J. WEAKLEY.

Miss Ella Weakley gave an excellent oration on the subject: "Building the Wall." She first spoke of the nations of the past and the glory they attained. But although these nations and people have lived and died, we are profiting today by their experience, and are using what we have learned from them in building our walls. In the walls each one has a work to do. "Never say you will not carry the material, because you cannot place them. Let us work in the lower fields with a will come to us to take up higher work. It is better to mix the mortar well than to lay the topmost stone insecurely."

The oration throughout was well written and full of excellent ideas.

LULU OWENS.

Miss Lulu Owens would have graduated in the class of 1892, if she had not been prevented by sickness. She had done all the work required of a high school graduate except delivering an oration. This she did last night and received her diploma along with the class of 1900.

"Her topic was: 'On Small Hinges Swing the Doors of Life.' An idea of her oration may be obtained from the first sentence, 'When the historian begins to construct a story from the fragments of the Past, two elements must govern his procedure. He must both regard the persons whose actions form the material for his history and the results which those actions superinduced.' Along these two lines she clearly portrayed on how 'small hinges swing the doors of life' and 'trifles light as air make up the sum of human life.'"

Supt. J. H. Sayre in a neat speech, presented the diplomas to the class, it being the ninth time that he has performed that duty before a Cedarville audience. The immense crowd then left the hall feeling that the training which our schools were affording the youth of the town was of first class order.

Closing Exercises of the Schools.

The closing exercises of the different grades of the schools were something out of the ordinary this week. Instead of giving these exercises in their rooms at the school building, they were given in the Opera House, Wednesday and Thursday of this week, and during each session the Opera house was crowded with the patrons of the school. The exercises consisted of declamations, songs, dialogues and drills. We wish especially to mention the drill given by the 7th and 8th grades, Miss Blair's pupils. The girls were dressed in blue and red checked cloth and the boys in white duck, and as they were drilled on the stage and sang the national air, they presented a very pleasing appearance.

The work has been quite rubbed at this office for the past two weeks, which accounts for the error.

COGITATIONS

Some Hints About the Theatre, Which Should be Taken Seriously by Some of Our Theater Goers.

When you go to the theatre, you should enter talking in a loud and careening tone of voice in order that folks may know that you are not afraid, and that you know a theatre from Adam's off ox. We do not know that Adam's ox was really worth knowing, but take it for granted, since everybody seems to think he was a pretty good sort of an individual to know. If you seem a little bashful, folks may think you do not own the show. That would be an evidence of provincialism very humiliating to admit.

Try to have the usher take you to the wrong seat, so that you will be obliged to make a tour of the entire house extra, thus giving everybody an opportunity of seeing that you are present.

It is not the best form to like any play that comes along, and then folks who do not know that you haven't money enough to buy a setting hen will imagine that you have seen the best in the metropolitan cities. Not many will believe it, especially if they see your celluloid collar and your big, angular feet, but strangers won't know any better.

Quarrel some with the ushers and let the people know that your money is as good as anybody else's. They won't know that you got it for leading the bull dogs in the parade.

Talk about the play in a loud voice, so that your neighbors will be much annoyed by your rancorous gabble and your breath that smells like fifteen cents worth of winter onions.

When the orchestra plays, don't listen, but talk boisterously and laugh loudly, particularly at your own jokes. Otherwise they may not be laughed at. Borrow somebody's opera glasses and pretend they are your own. If you see anybody on the opposite side of the opera house for whom you have sawed wood in the last week, go over and talk to them between acts, and stumble over as many people's feet in getting there, as you possibly can. It gives you an air of reckless abandon and independence that you wouldn't have if you paid your debts and kept your teeth brushed.

Pretend to go to sleep during the performance and folks will think you have been around so much that you are tired of the whole business and have become somewhat "blase."

If you can manage to go out between acts it will add to your reputation and won't cost much. If you can get about five cents of whiskey, the people will think you have been against the real thing, and it will not cost you a great deal. Nobody will know that you are just a cheap skate.

When the show is over, the best way to show that you are used to being out till after ten o'clock is to get up before the last act closes and make a rush for the door. It shows that you know enough to go home when the show is over and nobody will think that you are making your living sponging off your mother, who supports the whole family by taking in washing.

It is always a sign of good breeding to make a grand stampede for the doors when you see that the play is about to end. It helps out those who wish to hear the close, and gives the people on the stage a chance to reach the climax. Some worldly folks might want to shoot you with a big, overgrown, double barreled shotgun that scatters, but you needn't care for that. You are not afraid.

Follow these rules, and you will be the delight of every theatre manager from Maine to California, even if you don't know California from the story of Bluebeard.

THE BARNYARD.

JOHN BROWN JEWETT.

On a rock by the sea,
Bare of verdure or tree,
Saw a bird with his legs in his hand,
And he watched the sun rise
Till it opened the sky,
And divided the sea and the land.

Then he poured forth a song
That grew ever more strong,
And that thrilled through the land
And the sea
With the power of its theme,
Like a musical dream
Of the Wonderful Mystery.

The waves tuned their roar
Into the chimes on the shore
And the shore hummed in chords to their swell,
And the sky poured around
A sweet murmur of sound
Like the tones of an infinite bell.

All space found a tongue
With the song that he sung;
'Twas a melody grander than Man,
For the tale that it told
Was eternally old
Ere time and creation began.

The Census and Persons Away From Home During June.

The count of the people in the United States will begin in all parts of the country June 1, and end in the cities two weeks later and in the rest of the country before the close of the month. The people are to be counted at their places of residence, but as many persons and families will be away from their homes during June there is some danger that such persons will not be counted. If they are not counted, the locality in which they live will be misrepresented to that extent, and in some cases this misrepresentation may be enough to affect the representation in Congress of the State from which they come. Local pride and state pride, therefore, should influence all such absentees to take reasonable precautions against being omitted from enumeration in their places of residence. Such omissions are most likely to occur in the large cities where families close their homes and go elsewhere for the summer. The occurrence of the Paris exposition this year is likely to increase the number absent from the country.

In all cases of contemplated absence the head of the family is requested by the Census Office to communicate with the supervisor of the district in which he lives. He is also requested to leave information regarding his answers to the questions which are to be asked with some responsible neighbor who will agree to see that it reaches the enumerator on his rounds. Such information might better be left as a memorandum in writing, as in that case it is less likely to be overlooked. The questions to which answers are desired apply primarily to the population, but also to farms and manufacturing establishments. They are being published from time to time in the press of the country.

By taking this trouble the absent citizen will do justice to his locality and his state, and materially aid the Census Office in the performance of its duties.

The Name and Address of the Supervisor for this district is Edward Q. Crane, Batavia, O.

Christian Endeavorers' Convention.

Christian Endeavorers of Ohio will take advantage of the fact that the Convention is held abroad this year to make the State meeting in a measure take the place of the International Convention. Thousands of Endeavorers cannot attend the London meeting, so it is designed to have the annual State Convention at Toledo assume a more important aspect than usual. President Miller and the local committee directed by Rev. G. W. Belsey have arranged for features that will make the meeting an intellectual, social and spiritual triumph.

The sessions will be held in the First Congregational Church, Toledo, O., June 26-28. Special rates on railroads, ample accommodations and a program replete with sparkling services and able addresses will all be appreciated by the Christian Endeavorers who will assemble in Toledo this year. It is planned to have no meetings simultaneous, thus enabling Endeavorers to attend all the sessions.

Business houses will be graced with decorations of green and gold, and the flowers in the City Parks will be a welcome in G. E. designs and emblems.

Not Remedy.

Our barn and outbuildings were shot with rats. Tried live water traps—all to no purpose; neither would poison do the business to our satisfaction. At last, catching a rat she was promptly tarred with hot oil. After that released to have her own way. Well, she must have had the other rodents of her kind soon treated. We do not see or hear of them since. —Herman Orkels.

G. F. Church Speech.

The Synod of the Reformed Presbyterian Church of North America will convene in Cedarville, May 30th, at 7:30 p.m., and will continue in sessions one week. The morning and afternoon sessions will be taken up with the regular business of Synod; the evenings will be given to the discussion of various phases of the church's work.

On Tuesday evening, May 29th, Dr. D. B. Willson, Allegheny; Dr. T. P. Stevenson, Philadelphia; and Rev. T. H. Acheson, Denver, will speak in the Ervin-Williamson Hall. On Wednesday, morning and afternoon, there will be held, in the church a Conference on missions, and in the Hall above mentioned an Institute for National Reform workers.

Snake Epidemic.

Logan county is afflicted with an epidemic of blacksnakes. Countless reptiles are being slaughtered in the yards and streets of county towns. The snakes are shedding, and hundreds of skins are found. Women and children are terrorized and measures may be taken by the county to kill off the superabundance of black snakes.

Baccalaureate Address.

The baccalaureate address was made to the graduating class, in the Opera House, Sabbath afternoon, by Hon. Lewis D. Bonebrake, state commissioner of common schools. Mr. Bonebrake is a very interesting talker and held the attention of the audience throughout his address. His subject was "Preparation for Leadership." He first impressed upon the audience that it was natural that there would be leaders among men and then gave some very explicit directions how this "Leadership" could be obtained. The music of the afternoon was furnished by a choir of some of the best singers of the town, led by Rev. W. J. Sanderson.

Chicago Mutton.

Chicago mutton-eaters, who have been suddenly possessed with an unaccountable desire to go mountain-climbing for the summer, whose appetites have become voracious for beef, pork, canned goods and forbidden comestibles, may feel relieved to know that they may have been buying an eating goat's meat instead of mutton. Nearly 100,000 bewiskered billies and horned bunnies are sold annually to the butchers in and near Chicago. The meat is a little darker and somewhat sweeter than that of sheep or lamb, and as it is called "mutton" by the butchers the consumer doesn't know the difference.

A Free Scholarship to Each County.

The Carnegie College, a newly incorporated institution at Rogers, O., in order to introduce its methods of teaching by correspondence, will give one Free Scholarship to each county in our State. The Free Scholarship grants to the student free tuition in the Normal and Academic Courses, and also in the Business Courses, including Book-keeping and Short-hand. All the instruction is given by mail at the student's home. Students making application for Free Scholarships should write at once to the College and mention this paper, and also the county and state.

Fatal Accident.

John Gorman, a trackman on the Spring Valley branch of the Dayton and Xenia traction line, was instantly killed by a company car about 9:30 Saturday night. Gorman had been in Dayton until about 8 o'clock that evening, when he boarded a car for his home. It is said that he was considerably under the influence of liquor when he entered the car. When near his home the car was stopped and Gorman was assisted off. About an hour later this same car was making its return trip to Dayton, and when near the spot where Gorman was put off there was seen the form of a man, but owing to the steepness of the curve, it was impossible to elude the speed of the car, and in almost a second the car wheels were crushing the body of the victim into a shapeless mass. His skull was crushed, and the left leg was almost torn from his body. Death was instantaneous. Gorman has been with this company as trackman for some time. He was 45 years old and single.

Don't Fail To Insure Your Property in the Home Insurance Co. of New York

Every Description of Town and Farm Property Insured Against Fire, Lightning and Tornado.

Farmers insuring in this Company do not thereby incur their property, or make themselves liable for the losses of others. Why insure in a corporation without a dollar of capital, or in some weak company, when full protection can be had in a company like The Home of New York. The Home's most liberal farm policy and simple application is very taking with the farmers generally. Hundreds of them are now insuring in the reliable old Company in Ohio. The Home's $12,457,928.52 assets and $4,804,793.81 cash surplus not only pre-empted cyclones. No one knows when it will start on its mission of destruction, laying waste your beautiful homes. Many of our citizens and sturdy farmers are seeking the HOME's protection against both fire and tornado. Every body should remember that the HOME pays a large direct tax in your county on every dollar received from its citizens for insurance. For insurance in the HOME apply to our local agent.
